Background

ASEAN Economic Community has prevailed at the end of 2015. Regarding this issue, it has some consequences. One of them is the open flow of products, services, and human resources across ASEAN countries. In addition, ASEAN members can freely sell their industrial products. In other words, this policy can increase the degree of products competition among those countries. Service industry will take part in all ASEAN countries without boundaries. Another consequence is there are many employment opportunities among ASEAN countries. However, when one side can enlarge employment opportunities, it can threaten less skilled human resources position in a particular country.

To confront the invasion of foreign workers from several countries, it is necessary to put up candidates who have qualified manpower that can be accepted in other countries. In that case, it is necessary for educational institutions at national, regional, and international level to have assured quality. Also, based on the demands of the regional labor qualification, it is expected that vocational education graduates can implement quality assurance in accordance with the framework of regional labor qualification.

Vocational education aims to produce skilled human resources to meet the demands. Economy growth in a country depends on the
